

The Laspa Center for Leadership at Scripps College

Millennial Leaders Program

Today, leadership is a global enterprise—and its face is changing. From New York to Paris to Hong Kong, women hold top positions in corporate, government, and nonprofit organizations in unprecedented numbers. What does each of these leaders have in common? They understand how to seize professional opportunities, raise their visibility, and influence in complex environments.

The Millennial Leaders Program is designed to help young women who are early in their careers develop the skills necessary to propel them into executive-level positions in a range of professional, political, and social domains. The four-day program brings an international network of millennial-age professionals together with expert faculty to explore leadership theory and practice through multiple prisms. Participants benefit from the knowledge of veteran leaders as well as the perspectives, insights, and experiences of a global network of peers.

Program Outcomes

- Define the unique opportunities and challenges associated with women's leadership
- Explore the intersection of social identity and the leader's identity
- Uncover your position vis-à-vis structures of power
- Investigate a range of leadership skills and styles while assessing your own
- Gain the resources and tools to navigate or change inequitable systems and structures
- Plug into an international network of professional peers and mentors

A top-ranked women's liberal arts college founded in 1926 in Claremont, California, Scripps College offers a rigorous interdisciplinary curriculum, a robust intellectual community, a commitment to diversity and inclusion, and a rich residential experience designed to shape the next generation of leaders.

In 2015, the Laspa Center for Leadership was established at Scripps to assist young women in developing the necessary attributes, knowledge, and skills to lead in the 21st century. The center is closing the gender leadership gap with programming, partnerships, and engagement designed to empower emerging women leaders and to expand women's global influence, power, and impact.
